

CHASE METHOD

Chase almost constantly gives money to new clients who open an account and receive a direct deposit from the employer to this account.

Bonuses can range from $ 200 to $ 500.

Many banks give out such bonuses, but Chase does not have a minimum deposit amount from the employer, at which a bonus is credited to us, which we will abuse.

The problem is that Chase will not count the bonus for peer-to-peer transfers via zelle, cashapp, etc., as well as transfers from other banks.

But, there is a way to cheat the chase and get 200 bucks by spending only 3 dollars.

Step 1.

Follow the link <https://account.chase.com/consumer/banking/seo>

Click on the green button and create a Chase self-registration.

Or we give this link to the seller of self-registers.

The process of opening an account for this offer and without it is absolutely the same.

Nuance: sometimes, due to bad credit, Chase does not want to open Total Checking and asks to open Chase Secure Banking:

Secure Banking is not suitable for us, they do not give a bonus for it, just use another fullku.

Also, on the offer page, you can simply get a coupon by email and send it to Chase's support. If the account is not older than two months, the coupon will be applied to the account (but once I got a self-registration after contacting support, so I do not recommend it)

Step # 2

We will need a TransferWise account (transferwise.com)

Register to any docks (or your own, if you like). Documents from any country are accepted.

Click on Send money

Click on External account (the Russian-language interface may differ, but I think intuitively you will understand where to click)

Select the Same currency transfer and enter the amount of 3 USD (if you have registered the transferwise account with ru ip, then probably the same currency option will not be available, then select international so that the recipient receives money in USD)

@Ranhacker

We fill in everything, click on Confirm , at the next step we confirm the transfer, and then pay.

Transferwise also accepts virtual kiwi cards.

By the way, Transferwise is a good thing when you need to top up your vcc or any other self-registration ba for a test. Money usually arrives at the bank the next day.

Step # 4

We are tracking our bonus.

The chase app has a tracker that allows you to track when Chase counts your transaction for a bonus, and this tracker will also show you exactly what day the bonus will be in your account.

I am using the bluestacks android emulator for these purposes.

There is no such tracker in the web version (and in my experience, the chase treats you much better when you log into your account through the application, and not through the web version)

The tracker is usually updated 2 days after your TransferWise transaction arrives.
